GENERAL GRANT'S TABLETS. The Messages Written by the Lamented ex-President on His Death-Bed.

As stated in the special dispatches to vesterday's STAR from Mt. McGregor, Dr. Douglas has preserved nearly two hundred tablets written to him by Gen. Grant during his illness. Further dispatches to THE STAR received last evening too late for publication gave the interlowing postmasters: Chas. H. Kavanaugh, at esting contents of many tablets written during July 5, at 10:30 a.m., he wrote: "I think I am not so weak as I was at this time yesterday."

> let, in which he spoke of the use of medicines in his disease and his familiarity with his own treatment, alluding to the habit he had some times of getting up himself and applying cocaine, taking a gurgle and cleaning out his mouth when he needed relief. In this tablet he said that if he kept on taking medicine and treating himself he would become quite a spetreating himself he would become quite a spe-cialist in the treatment of disease. He added that when he was educated for the life of a soldier he had no idea that he would live to see the rank of a soldier raised two grades higher and to have himself occupy both of these exalted positions; that he was never much of a politician, and yet had been two times President; that he had never been much of a book reader and we had never been much of a book reader and we had never been much of a book reader, and yet he now found himself the author of a book that was almost ready in print. He closed with a facetious remark that if he ever got well perhaps he would be authority on medicine. July 8th, at 11 a. m., the general wrote this significant tablet, "I feel pretty well, but get sleepy sitting in the air. I took a half hour's nan. Do you want me to go to the house? hour's nap. Do you want me to go to the house? I am as bright and well now, for the time, at least, as I ever will be." On the 10th of July, least, as I ever will be." On the 10th of July, one day less than a fortnight before Gen. Grant died, he wrote this significant tablet: "Burk has brought up the last of the first volume in print in two weeks. If they work hard they can have the second volume copied ready to go to the printer. I will feel that my work is done." He wrote at one o'clock in the morning on the 12th of July: "Not sleeping does not disturb me, because I have had so much sleep, and then I have been comparatively free from pain. I know a sick person cannot feel just as he would like all the time; but I think it a duty to the physician to know from time to time just to the physician to know from time to time just my feeling. It may benefit some other fellow sufferer hereafter." At 4 o'clock on the morn-ing of July 12th he inscribed the following: "I notice that your little girls and Julia (his grand-daughter) daughter) get along very happily together at their swing, lawn tennis and nice shade. They

On July 20, at 7 o'clock in the morning, almost exactly three days before the end came, the general, mistaking his comparative freedom from pain for an improvement in his condition, wrote as follows: "My rest for the night was better than the average. I am satisfied I shall have to give up coffee. It is distasteful, too, and harder to take than anything that goes into Liy mouth. I feel weak and feverish half hour since drinking coffee and I have an immoderate desire to have cold water yet.' The 22d of July, the day before he died, he wrote: "I don't think I slept the last time be-cause of the medicine, which put me to sleep the first and second time." He spoke of receiving medicine two times, it will be observed, but Dr. Douglas had given it to him but once. This indicates that the patient's mind was not as strong as it had been. After this tablet was written several more were handed by him to the doctor, but he considerately turned them over to the members of the family, for he felt that they belonged to them rather than to him. DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATIVES INVITED. The following invitation was issued last eve-

MT. McGREGOR, N.Y., August 3, 1885. The undersigned respectfully invites all ministers or representatives of foreign governments accredited to the United States to be present at and participate in the funeral ceremonies to be held on the 8th instant in New York over the remains of his father, late President of the United States, and general of the army. Gen-tlemen accepting this invitation are respect-fully requested to advise Gen. Hancock of their intention to be present, who will assign them FRED D. GRANT.

Gen. Grant's Secret.

A STRANGE STORY TOLD BY AN OLD SECRET The New York Herald to-day prints an interent, with an old ex-secret service officer in explanation of Mr. Chauncey M. Depew's reference to what Gen. Grant had said to him of the imminence of a second revolution. "It relates to the assassination plot," said this officer when asked what Gen. Grant's secret was. "That conspiracy was natched before Lincoln was inaugurated the second time. It contemplated the abduction of Lincoln for the benefit of another man. I refer to Vice Presiden Johnson. He was to be made the great man of the war. Lincoln was to be got out of the way. There were heavy rains one after another, and yet in the intervals there was nothing to prevent walking, the water having run off from with Stanton behind him, could not be expected to be lenient. Remember, I do not say that Johnson was a party to the conspiracy, but I ask you to read Gen. Butler's arraignment of Johnson during the impeachment trial. Read it carefully between the lines and see what it means. I tell you only this, that the list of men privy to the abduction of Lincoln would, if printed to-morrow, convulse this nation to Meeting association was held in the tabernacle. Johnson to John Wilkes Booth asking him to Mr. W. J. C. Dulany presided, with Mr. S. D. meet him at the Kirkwood house. Don't draw any inferences; I merely mean that they were on intimate terms."
"When and where was the conspiracy organ-

"It was the outgrowth of Seward's direct interposition in the case of Beal, the man convicted of the plot to liberate the prisoners at Johnston's Island, in Sandusky Bay. Lincoln was appealed to and promised that Beal should not die. Seward personally interfered and finally secured Beal's execution. A meeting was held at St. Catherine's, Canada, a few weeks afterward. The plot was hatched there. It was born of personal malice more than southern sympathy. The Beal case, and it alone, accounts for the attack on Secretary Seward. But this malicious scheme of a small cabal of vindictive men grew into a widely ramified conspiracy. Most dreadful of all, it became known among large circles in Washington. There were plenty of men in the Capitol on March 4 who went there to hear a different man from Lincoln make the inaugural address. It is terrible even now to think how rotten the heart of the political center of this nation then was. The surrender at Appomattox was a crushing blow. It came sooner than was expected. Lincoln's death had been resolved upon and the date fixed. But only a comparative few knew that this change had been made in the scheme.

"I have often wondered if Gen. Lee had not tive few knew that this change had been made in the scheme.

"I have often wondered if Gen. Lee had not obtained an inkling of the terrible crime in contemplation and hastened the capitulation. He never would have sanctioned a dastardly act. After the shooting the abject fear manifested by some people in Washington who had not been attacked is remembered yet. Too many people were hanged or not enough. The most experienced men in the service were put on the case. But one by one they were withdrawn. I was detailed for special duty, but stuck to the conspiracy. I found I was shadowed by other people. I have always suspected there was a conference one very dark night between Stanton, Wade and Grant that referred to the secret information obtained about the conspiracy. I was not present, though I was in the house when it occurred. The archives of the House judiciary committee contain, or did contain, some of the most startling testimony imaginable. Gen. Butler and George S. Boutwell knew all that Gen. Grant knew. If either man would tell what he knows, though it is not all the story, we might have the revelation yet. What I have merely hinted at shows how wise Gen. Grant was to keep this awful secret so long, and how indiscreet he would have been to confide it to anybody."

TWO CENTS. THE GRANT FUNERAL TRAIN.

How Those in Charge Have Determined to Carry Out the Details. From the New York World to-day. The remains of Gen. Grant will be placed on board the funeral car at Mount McGregor this morning at 11 o'clock. The seats have been removed. The rear of the car is entirely open, and every part of it is draped in mourning. The remains will be placed At 4 o'clock in the morning of the 8th of July upon the funeral car from the rear, and will rest upon neavy pedestals in the middle. The train will consume one hour in running down to Saratoga from the mountain top, being twenty minutes more than the usual schedule time. The transfer of the remains will be made at the Saratoga terminus of the mountain road, this being necessary because the mountain fu-neral car is mounted on narrow-gauge trucks, while the connecting roads are of the usual

The funerel-car "Woodlawn," heavily draped, will carry the remains from Saratoga to Albany, where they will lie in state until Wednesday noon. The ten cars comprising the train have been draped in black, and there is not a bit of color visible, the decorators relying for effect upon the massing of color. The family, Gen. Hancock and staff, the pall-bearers and representatives of the Grand Army and other organizations will make up the guests on the train. Mount McGregor will be left at 11 o'clock, Saratoga at noon, and Albany will be reached about 2 p. m. There will be a great procession of the 2 p.m. There will be a great procession of the third division of the national guard through Albany, under command of Gen. Joseph B. Carr. Other organizations will take part, and the whole will be directed by Adjutant General Wednesday the funeral train, with the mili-

At the Grand Central depot Wednesdsy afternoon the first and second divisions of the National Guard will meet the remains and, joining the regular military escort, accompany side the hall that evening.

Thursday and Friday the general public will be admitted to view the remains, and arrangements have been made so that the continuous line of visitors shall be kept moving without the property with the state of the corridor would not allow it, and so two draped balls take its place, and the eagle is placed at the foot of the remains.

Inited States marines and blue jackets; divisions of national guards under Gen. Shaler; guard of honor, consisting of United States troops and members of the G. A. R.; the funeral car containing the body; members of Gen. Grant's family; President Cleveland and his cabinet; public officers, the governors of the states, in the order of their admission to the Union, and municipal authorities; the Grand Army posts and all veteran organizations, under command of Major Gen. The line of march will be Broadway to 14th street, to 5th avenue, to 57th street, to Grand Boulevard, to 72d street, to Riverside drive, to 123d street. It is expected that the militia and civic bodies will be dismissed at 59th street, and only the regulars and the escort of honor and such other bodies as desire attend the remains to the grave. A Frightful Cyclone. TORNADO THAT CARRIED DEATH AND DE-STRUCTION ALONG THE DELAWARE-FAMI-Philadelphia and Camden. The track of the cyclone als o passed through Cecil county, Md. and the region of Smyrna, Del. The cyclone struck Philadelphia near Greenwich Point, demolishing a portion of the works of the Pennsylvania salt Manufacturing company and injuring several employes. It then look a course across the river, wrecking the river steamer Major Reybold and the ferryboat Peerless. The storm blew the pilot, Emery Towsend, and Capt. Eugene Reybold, of the steamer Reybold, into the river, drowning the former and painfully injuring the captain. The Peerless was swept clean almost to the water's edge, and a horse and wagon were hurled into the water and sank together to the bottom. The Reybold and sank together to the bottom. The Reybold had aboard about 50 passengers, who were greatly terrified, but it is not known that any one was drowned, though a woman's body seen floating in the river is thought to have been that of a passenger. The gale was so violent that, as an eye-witness describes it, it hoisted up the heavy machinery above the lower deck of the vessel as if it were putty. Everything above the water line was wrecked as completely as though the vessel had been in a naval engagement with a man-of-war. Mirrors were smashed, chairs and solas broken to splinters, and the carpets were torn to shreds in the cabin as if they had The storm then passed over to the Jersey side, striking John Dialogue's shipyards, below Kaighn's Point, and destroying the buildings of the establishment. It then took a course along the New Jersey river front, demolishing all the buildings in its path up to Bridge avenue, Cam-den. At this point the cyclone took an easterly course to 5th street, Camden, embracing in its path all that section of the city between 2d and 5th streets, to the Delaware river, which wasnes the northern section of the city. Passing over the river, skirting Petty's Island, the storm passed over to that part of the 25th ward of Philadelphia, known as Richmond. In its av-ages in Camden scores of dwelling houses were unroofed and some of them thrown down, and throofed and some of them thrown down, and the damage to the business property along the river front is enormous. Hundreds of families were rendered homeless, and one victim—Charles Daizey—was killed outright at the American Dredging Co.'s whart. Another—Harry Stevens—had his leg cut off by a flying piece of timber and will probably die.

The path of the storm through Richmond was marked with death and destruction was marked with death and destruction. About 150 dwelling houses were wrecked or so badly damaged as to be rendered unfit for habitation, and 200 families were driven from their omes to be cared for by their neighbors. A number of people were seriously, and some fatally injured. A girl of ten years, Lizzie Mc-Veygh, was killed at her home, No. 1721 Melvaie street, in sight of her mother, who was herself pinned to the floor by fallen rafters a few feet from her dying shild. The cyclone is described by those who witnessed its progress upon the river, where it could be seen to advantage, as an immense black cone-shaped cloud, with its apex resting upon the water and its base mingling with the rain clouds, which hung in dense masses from the sky.

the sky. IN MARYLAND AND DELAWARE. The cyclone passed through Cecil county, Md., about two miles south of Elkton, shortly after two o'clock in the afternoon. It appeared to be two o'clock in the afternoon. It appeared to be about a quarter of a mile in width. Marley's mills, near Beacon Hill, are reported to have been entirely destroyed. Barns and houses were blown down, and in one instance a farm house had every window blown out. A reaper and mower standing near the porch was picked up and carried away, and the man and his family barely escaped by taking refuge in a ravine. Large trees were twisted off like pipe stems. It is thought that great damage has been done elsewhere. No loss of life has been reported. Many poles of the Baltimore and Ohio and Western Union telegraph companies are down. A dispatch from Smyrna, Del., last night said: "A terrible cyclone visited this section this afternoon, totally destroying property for miles in a swath three hundred feet wide. Flocks were killed and orchards, corn fields, &c., were destroyed. No human lives are known to be lost."

Pursuing the Indians.

UNITED STATES TROOPS ON A HOT TRAIL The following telegram, forwarded by Gen. Pope, has been received by the adjutant general: "We have just received the following from Fort Huachuca, A. T.: Mr. Trevia, one of the Fort Huachuca, A. T.: Mr. Trevia, one of the citizens who was with Capts. Wood and Hatfield, left them on trail Tuesday, sixty miles in Mexico, just at the summit of Canano mountains. Trail hot and troops in full pursuit. In my opinion the band of ten or twelve Indians is the only one that has been on our side of the line, notwithstanding other reports. They came up to steal stock, but they have had to drop nearly all of it. So far, since Wood has been on their trail, they have dropped forty herd, which citizens have picked up. Wood's scouts played out and came back, unfortunately. Hatfield's were mounted and are with the command. The lightning smashed our telephone yesterday, and we have sent to Siding for dispatches.

placed the building under guard, no one being admitted without a pass. Its great size made the drapery a difficult matter, so that the most attention was paid to the porticos and pavil-ions on the exterior. Across the top of the cornice, over the wall of the front, was black material in festoons, caught up at graceful intervals, but the rain and wind of Saturday and last night tore it to shreds, as well as displacing and tearing much of the other decorations. In the porticos the large granite pillars are trimmed with broad black bands running from top to bottom in spiral fashion. The balconies contained two festoons, each made of black and white. The balconies on the four pavilions are dressed in a similar manner, with the addition that the windows behind them contained graceful sweeps of drapery. Near the door opening into the State street vestibule the somber canopy of the catafalque rises in its dismal grandeur. Battle flags which saw service under the man for whom they to-day form part of the drapery are tastefully arranged.
